ABOUT THE STATE.

Items of Interest Gleaned from Our Exchanges.

Morris Gates, proprietor at the Gale Inn, at Fairlee, a popular and experienced hotel man, has purchased Hotel Low at Bradford of Herbert L. Doyle, who has conducted the hotel about three years.

An unusual accident happened Friday in Burlington by which bystanders were given the sight of a harnessed horse running on two legs. The horse belonged to Frank Salsus and had been left standing on the southern side of Main street between Church and St. Paul streets. When Mr. Salsus started the horse the animal became frightened and kicked, catching its hind legs between the buckboard and the whipple-tree, and ran to St. Paul street on its fore legs. The horse was much strained but recovered soon. The buckboard was considerably damaged.

ILL AND DESPONDENT.

Wilbur Richardson of North Troy, Vt., Suddenly Disappears.

North Troy, Aug. 14.—Crazed by illness and despondent over the loss of a child, Wilbur Richardson of this place has disappeared, and a search is being made to ascertain his whereabouts. Early in the week he told his wife that he did not wish to harm her and should go away before he lost control of himself.

Mr. Richardson has been in good health and cheerful up to last winter, when his child died. Since then he has been morose, and his whole nature seemed to have changed. Although not wealthy, he had some money, and carried about $100 with him when he went away. He is 40 years old, and has a wife and one child. He has lived at North Troy for many years and is well known. It is not believed that he committed suicide, but a thorough search of the fields and streams in the vicinity will be made.

The Lost Company

[Copyright, 1905, by H. B. McClure.]

The orders were for Colonel Davis of the Twenty-second Federal regiment, stationed about four miles from Bull's Gap, in the Tennessee mountains, to move by night and capture a Confederate signal station which had a post upon a mountain crest ten miles away. This station commanded the pass so far as observation went, and every move of the Federal force there was at once reported.

The idea was to move slowly and quietly, and this was carried out. The regiment had four hours and a half to make the ten miles, and the vicinity of the signal station was reached at 4 o'clock in the morning. Three companies were sent to the left, three to the right, and Company E was to make a long detour to get in the rear of the station and hold a mountain road against retreat. All movements were made so quietly that no alarm was given.

Day had just begun to dawn when up from the valley came a white mist, cold as a shroud and thick enough to cut out all objects twenty feet away. The Confederates at the station could be heard moving and talking, but there could be no attack until the mist disappeared. It hung over the mountain for two long hours before the rising sun began to eat into it, and it was near 7 o'clock before the Federals dashed forward. The surprise was complete. There were only fifty Confederate soldiers there as guard, and seeing the force opposed to them they prudently surrendered. Not a man was killed on either side, although there was considerable firing. The regiments sent out on the flanks were up in time, and Colonel Davis supposed that the firing would bring in Company E.

When an hour had gone by and nothing had been heard of it scouts were sent forward with orders for it to join the main force at once. At the end of two hours the scouts returned and reported that no trace of the company could be found beyond a certain point.

The main column returned to camp, and from hour to hour looked for the missing company. When a day had gone by without news from it two scouts were sent out. There was fear now that it had been gobbled up by a Confederate force. The scouts struck the highway and followed it to the bend, but they brought back no news.

A native had gone along with it to act as guide, and after three or four days had passed it was concluded that he might have led the detachment far enough to bring about its capture by a Confederate force. The matter rested there for a week. Then two Confederate prisoners were captured, but they denied having heard the least news of the missing company. Had it been captured they must have known of the event.

An advance by the Confederates in force just at this time prevented any further search by the Federals, and for six weeks the fate of the hundred men was almost forgotten. Then there was an investigation ordered from Washington, and the result was the trial and dismissal of Colonel Davis. The Federals had been driven out of that part of Tennessee, and as a matter of fact they did not regain the ground again until the close of the war. Flags of truce were frequently resorted to, and all prisoners were closely questioned, but the war came to an end at last and the mystery had not been solved.

No move was made until a year later, and then Colonel Davis himself took up the case. He was a wealthy man, and he smarted under the dis-

THE REAL TEST

Of Herpicide is in Giving it a Thorough Trial.

There is only one test by which to judge of the efficiency of any article and that is by its ability to do that which it is intended to do. Many hair vipers may look nice and smell nice, but the point is—do they eradicate Dandruff and stop falling hair?

No, they do not, but Herpicide does, because it goes to the root of the evil and kills the germ that attacks the papilla from whence the hair gets its life.

Letters from prominent people everywhere are daily proving that Newbro's Herpicide stands the "test of use."

It is a delightful dressing, clear, pure and free from oil or grease.

grace put upon him by the court martial.

Accompanied by two picked men he went over the route from Bull's Gap. From the Confederate signal station he struck for the highway and reached it. There was but one house on the road between that point and the bend, and the widow occupying it said that no force had passed on that night. She must have heard the company had it marched that way. The scouts went out had never questioned this woman.

Returning over the highway Davis and his companions had covered half the distance when they noticed the mouth of a ravine to the right. It started at the highway and descended so gradually that it might have been taken in the night for another road. It deepened as they followed it, and at the end of a quarter of a mile, when it had become a rough and rugged ravine, it came to a sudden ending.

This did not look at all natural, and an investigation lasting half a day brought to light the fact that there had been a landslide there. Hundreds of thousands of tons of earth and rock, accompanied by hundreds of trees, had gone crashing down into the ravine and filled it to a depth of twenty feet. The fill was from bank to bank, and its length was about 500 feet. Weeds and bushes and young trees were already growing on the middle ground.

The men enlisted the help of negroes and set to work with pick and shovel, and at the end of a week they came upon a rusty Federal musket. They ceased there. They were satisfied that under that great mound were lying the bones of the missing hundred, and it was for the government to uncover them or let them lie on forever.

In that thick morning mist of long ago the guide had led them off the road, bewildered and uncertain, and they had been huddled together in the bottom of the ravine when there came a landslide to overwhelm them to the last man.

Cheese.

Cheese has great nutritive value, since it contains twice the nourishment of the same weight of beef. Raw cheese is more indigestible than cooked cheese and old cheese less so than new. Brie and Roquefort are French cheeses, ripened until soft; Camembert comes from Normandy, Parmesan and Gorgonzola from Italy, Gruyere and Sargans from Switzerland and Cheddar from England.
